March 30, 2007 08:13 AM

Controversy over the recent death of a former Lansing resident. Andrew Anthos died last month on a sidewalk in Detroit. The 72 year old was gay, and initial reports indicated his death may have been the result of a hate crime.

However, Detroit police say they've found no witnesses to any attack, and Wayne Countys' medical examiner has ruled Anthos died of natural causes, but the national gay and lesbian task force isn't buying that. They're now offering a $5,000 reward for info that leads to a conviction in this case.
