

Anti-Gay Marriage Measures in the U.S.

This map has required no update since: May 6, 2009

In 1996, Congress passed and President Clinton signed into law the "Defense of Marriage Act" (DOMA). It says that no state is required to honor same sex marriages performed in another state. It also seeks to restrict how marriage may be defined or interpreted under federal law to "a legal union between one man and one woman as husband and wife."

Many states have passed both a statute and a constitutional amendment.

¹ Missouri's 1996 anti-marriage law was overturned by its state supreme court, but another law passed in 2001.
² Hawaii enacted a state constitutional amendment in 1998 stating that "the legislature shall have the power to reserve marriage to opposite-sex couples." In turn, also in 1998, the state legislature passed a law prohibiting same-sex couples from marrying.
³ Iowa's 1998 anti-marriage law was overturned by the Iowa Supreme Court on April 3, 2009.
⁴ California's law was overturned by the California Supreme Court in 2008, but a constitutional amendment, Prop. 8, passed later that year.
⁵ Virginia has both a narrow and broad statutory ban on marriage as well as a constitutional amendment.
⁶ Maine repealed this measure on May 6, 2009, granting the freedom to marry.
